

SREDable Fact Sheet

- SREDable web application software is for Canadian organizations to improve the success of receiving scientific research and experimental development (SR&ED) claims – cash refunds and tax credits. For more information about the SR&ED program click here.
- Canada’s main innovation incentive is tax credits through the Scientific Research and Experimental Development (SR&ED) program, through which Ottawa and the provinces disperse roughly $5-billion a year to tens of thousands of companies (click to source).
- SREDable’s online wizard process auto qualifies projects, generates an expense report and a technical description, and completes required forms ready to send to the CRA for audit, approval and refund.
- SR&ED claim challenges: Designed with the assistance of the CRA, SREDable.com’s timetracking helps companies comply with the demands of the CRA. The CRA has made it clear in recent letters to claimants that “SR&ED claims must be supported by timesheets detailing what SR&ED activity was carried out on a regular basis. Failure to maintain adequate evidence to support the eligibility of the SR&ED work will result in the disallowance of your SR&ED claims.” CRA SR&ED reviewers have told us that “Eligible claims are being denied by the CRA because they lack adequate time tracking”.
- SREDable SR&ED claim solution: SREDable’s timetracking and web application wizard has CRA interpretations built right in, ensuring that CRA interpretations are met, mandatory claim information and evidence is included and auto-generates the required claim forms (t661).
- SREDable is used by Canadian organizations:
  - Software
  - Engineering
  - Research
  - Accountants
  - Canadian Revenue Agency (CRA).
